INTRODUCTION. One of the concerns in food industry is the contamination by pathogens, which are frequent cause of food borne diseases. Over the past decade, recurrent outbreaks of diarrhea, combined with the natural resistance of the causative agents, contributed to its status as hazard.

Bacteriocins from lactic acid bacteria: purification

The range of analytical data listed on the ADS depends on the type of product, as methods for analyzing amino acid derivatives (and very short peptides), peptides, and "non-peptide" compounds differ somewhat.

This minireview touches upon the challenges and opportunities peptides experience on the track to become an approved pharmaceutical. Peptide attributes originally considered troublesome with respect to drug development may now turn out to be more convenient rather than unfavourable.

Agarose is a polysaccharide, generally extracted from certain red seaweed. It is a linear polymer made up of the repeating unit of agarobiose, which is a disaccharide made up of D-galactose and 3,6-anhydro-L-galactopyranose. Agarose is one of the two principal components of agar, and is purified from agar by removing agar's other component, agaropectin.

Peptide mass fingerprinting (PMF) (also known as protein fingerprinting) is an analytical technique for protein identification in which the unknown protein of interest is first cleaved into smaller peptides, whose absolute masses can be accurately measured with a mass spectrometer such as MALDI-TOF or ESI-TOF. The method was developed in 1993 by several groups independently.

La purification des protéines est une série de processus destinés à isoler une ou des protéines à partir d'un mélange complexe (cellules ou autres particules ou matrices). C'est une étape importante en recherche fondamentale pour la caractérisation de la fonction, la structure et des interactions d'une protéine d'intérêt, mais aussi en recherche appliquée et industrie pour ...
